ACMA Compliance, Fast

Is your organisation involved in direct telemarketing?

If so, you probably already know about the ACMA Do Not Call Register. Number Washer, developed in Australia by Far Edge, is designed specifically to maintain and substantiate compliance with the ACMA legislation. Number Washer makes it easy to submit lists of phone numbers for washing, allows your marketing team to export clean number lists and keeps complete history of washed batches.

Comprehensive number washing management

Number Washer allows your staff to submit numbers for washing in batches or individually in a variety of formats. The system can be configured to submit batches for washing at specific time intervals, as determined by the client. That could be once a day or every five minutes, depending on your requirements. Staff can submit numbers via text or Excel files, or by keying numbers in manually.

Easy-to-use web interface

Number Washer has a simple and easy-to-use interface, and requires minimal training to get users started. Users access it via a web browser, so it's straightforward to run across different office locations.

Know where you stand

With Number Washer, you have a complete audit trail of batches submitted for washing, as well as the results that the ACMA register returned, with a time and date stamp. The result is complete transparency of which numbers were checked, when, by whom and with what result. This information could potentially save your business thousands of dollars if faced with a claim of non-compliance.

System Integrity

Number Washer offers user access levels appropriate to each role in the process. A robust security model at the database level ensures the integrity of your information, helping you maintain legislation compliance in a transparent way.

"The Number Washer software ensures our organisation maintains its legislative requirements. Far Edge listened to our requirements, provided a comprehensive solution response and delivered a robust to specification and on time tool. They were well organised, provided excellent documentation and were very professional throughout the project. A software vendor I would definitely recommend."
